People say they don't understand why people convert to Islam. In a lot of cases, they see Muslims actually believe in heir religion. They see Christians who don't.

Christianity has a long history of adapting to the needs of the parishioners.

Martin Luther's A Mighty Fortress was adapted from a beer song.

Heard of a Manchester NH bar (Strange Brew) that was holding religious talks etc as part of a program called Theology On Tap.

Wiki:

>>Theology on Tap is a program of lectures sponsored by a number of local Catholic dioceses. The lectures, which are often given by noted spiritual leaders and religious academics, address current topics in religion and theology, and are notable and sometimes controversial for their venue, which is normally a bar or restaurant. The concept has become common among other Christian Denominations, particularly Episcopalians, Lutherans, Anglicans, and some Presbyterian and Methodist churches...Advocates for Theology on Tap, however, have defended the concept, calling it, among other things, the practice of "bringing the faith to where the people are." The fact that the lectures are open to the public is also hoped to bring in a broad audience; one organizer has stated that the goal of the lectures is "to reach out to people primarily in their 20s and 30s that may have strayed from their faith."

What am I missing? I see nothing wrong; unorthodox, but not wrong. I see schoolkids gathered in something that resembles a group Baptism. I do not see any snarky attitudes, I see no panicked expression of someone forced to be there against their will. I see new Christians being brought together in Jesus's name.

What? Because they are in a pool vs a church?

Not always important. I was taught in Catechism that the real church is within the heart and soul of every Christian who loves God and His creations. This photo makes me happy to know there will be that many more Christian souls to counter the oncoming Muslim Invasion.

People say they don't understand why people convert to Islam. In a lot of cases, they see Muslims actually believe in heir religion. They see Christians who don't.

My husband and I lived in Saudi Arabia (Ras Tanura) for five years and we traveled ALL OVER the world.

The world is full of
1. Nice people
2. Jerks
3. In-between those two.

Jerks people this planet and are of ALL races, nationalities and creeds.
*Women DO express their jerk-ness differently than men do.
*Children express their jerk-ness differently than adults do.
*The elderly express their jerk-ness differently than young folks do.

Crabby people are everywhere as well.
Those folks who are ALWAYS cheerful are annoying too.

Thank goodness that it's God's job to take this all into account when it comes our turn for eternity.

I remember seeing a priest saying Mass at the front. I can't remember if it was WW II or the Korean War. It was so moving because so many of those American men WERE going to die.
If the last thing they did was go to Mass and receive Holy Communion, I think that's a good thing.

Agreed. They will attempt any absurdity in order to try to blaspheme against Our Lord in His Sacrifice and to desecralize.
